Fancourt trip

We got back from our Fancourt trip last week after a great few days of fun, friendship and golf.

This was our 4th trip to Fancourt and Team Ian went into the Tour with a 2 -1 lead. Over the course of the weekend that lead was quickly demolished and Team Joe walked away victorious.

So now that we are 2-all, next year's trip will be the decider!

Thank you to all that participated and we can't wait for next year

Fancourt 2019

Product of the week

Srixon AD333 Tour golf balls – on special this week only for R90/ sleeve!

Golf tip of the week

This week Elsabe gives you advice on playing from a downhill lie just short of the 18th green.

40 YEARS OF MARKETING LEADING INNOVATION.

Everyone wants forgiveness

Take it where you need it

If you describe yourself as a good or solid ball striker, these two shots still provide you with different challenges. You don't need forgiveness in your irons on the short shot, but the longer #5 or #4 iron shot will test your skills and consistency.

If you're consistent throughout your set, then a better players iron (more compact, possibly forged) is a great choice. If you start to lose consistency in the mid-irons, then consider blending two iron models through your set. A players iron for the shorter irons, and a more forgiving model for the mid and longer irons.

The shorter irons can be compact with a CoG that is a little higher, and closer to the face, with limited launch assistance.

The mid to longer irons can be a different model: one that offers a larger hitting zone and a little more launch assistance.

It's about the distances

If you want to blend two different models into one set, then it's not about the numbers on the sole. It's about the distances you hit each club. As well as finding the perfect fit, we want to make sure you have each distance base covered.

Knock it down. Knock it close.

YOU SEE a lot
OF THIS

Watch the Tour on TV and you'll see a lot of players finishing like this on wedge shots. It's a clue that they've played a lower trajectory wedge shot. They know it's easier to control the distance they're hitting their wedge if they keep the ball on a lower trajectory.

Want to make the most of opportunities and hit your wedge approach shots close to the hole? Then learn this skill.

Easier control and more spin

You'll hit your target distance easier. And the ball will have a ton of spin and check really quickly. Then learn to hit lower flighted, higher spinning wedge shots.
