

The ducks at Zwartkop have spoken

Even they think it's time for us to get back to golf

A huge thank you for the Caddie support

Due to the generosity of our members, and especially the LSGC Corporate and Renegades School, we have been able to give our caddies money or a food parcel almost every week since the start of lockdown.

We are trying to come up with an idea to assist them once golf opens up again, so that all our caddies can take home enough money to feed themselves and their families.

If you would like to donate you can still do so:

Please deposit into the Club's bank account with the reference: CADDIES – COVID19.

Golf's next generation.
It's competition time.

From the age of about 16 years old, junior golfers who started their journey at 6, will move from learning to play, to what the athlete development model calls "training to compete". This is where we fine-tune skills and start to incorporate competitive elements into training.

Practice makes permanent

Lots of research into expertise has revealed that the most significant factor in mastering a skill is practice. But it's not as simple as just hitting hundreds of golf balls for hours at a time. The quality of that practice is extremely important. We'll help your child work on the things they need to, so they can reach their full potential.

Happy, healthy children

When a junior starts to master golf skills, we see them experience joy and excitement. They become more self-confident. They are happy and eager to learn. That's what golf can do for your child. If you have a child who could benefit from the game, when we next see you, let's talk about it, or
