It's a simple matter

Do you feel that you sink enough putts in the 6 to 15 feet range? On TV, the top professionals seem to be 'hot' in this range. How much room for improvement do you have?

BENCHMARK

Find a flat 10-foot putt on the practice green. Without an 'aid', take 10 putts. How many can you sink?

Your ability to square the face at impact will significantly influence the number of putts you sink. A face that is just 1° open at impact will mean a putt missed from 8 feet.

The benchmark above is well worth completing on a regular basis. Most of you will be sinking 5 or 6. You should, after a warm-up, be at 8 or even 9.

"Most amateur golfers can improve their score by 3 – 4 shots per round if they work on improving their ability to square the face at impact."

Set up to succeed

There are so many factors that influence your ability to square the face of your putter. Your setup and alignment. The length of your putter. The lie angle and weighting of the putter. Even the grip on the putter. Let's check that setup so you can succeed.

Let them play

First impressions last

Children are much more likely to take up golf when their first impression of the game is enjoyable. But make things too complicated too early, and they could end up seeing golf as nothing more than difficult and unpleasant.

Formal lessons should either start when your child asks for them or at about 6 years old. And even then, it's about a fun approach to the game. We want to avoid using complicated terminology about swing mechanics.

0 - 6 years
"ACTIVE START"

When coaching young children starting in golf, we focus on developing their movement ABCs, Agility, Balance, Coordination, and Speed, to prepare them for later golf-specific coaching.

Your child can have it all

Golf helps your child develop physically and mentally. It's safe, healthy, and fun. Let them play.
