What is the problem?

Most golfers don't sink enough of their putts in the 8 to 15-foot range. Small improvements can make a 3 to 4-shot impact on your scorecard.

85% of the balls direction is determined by
FACE ANGLE and 15%
by SWING PATH direction.

Amongst the many reasons you may miss is a very small failure to square the face of your putter at impact. A very small amount closed or open causes you to miss left or right. Which side do you miss most? Let's find out.

BENCHMARK

On a practice green, place a few ball markers at different locations in a flat area. Then line up a few putts to each ball marker. Are you missing more to the left or the right? It's discovery time.

"Setup and alignment are critical to you sinking more putts in the 8 – 15-foot range. Unfortunately, too many golfers are making that more difficult than it should be."

Set up to succeed

There are so many factors that influence your ability to square the face of your putter. Your setup and alignment. The length of your putter. The lie angle and weighting of the putter. Even the grip on the putter. Let's check that setup so you can succeed.

Let them play

Down with the system

Golf's many rules and etiquettes are important for upholding standards, but they don't help to entice children to the game. Enforcing "the way things should be done", like playing a full 9 holes before going back to the clubhouse, or using a proper grip, can put your child off.

The golden rule is 'have fun'

Trying to hit a little ball over long distances into a hole is a fun and unusual challenge. That's all golf is to a young child. We, adults, tend to get caught up in systems and forget that. But when your child sees you having fun, they're almost guaranteed to do so as well.

We use these years to develop basic golf skills in a casual and fun atmosphere in our coaching. So every time they come home, they can't wait for their next lesson.

Your child can have it all

Golf helps your child develop physically and mentally. It's safe, healthy, and fun. Let them play.
