3 Steps to better par 3s Become a master of the par 3

It's a single shot to the flag. You can tee your ball up and give yourself a perfect lie. This should be an opportunity to hit the green and a birdie putt. But for so many of us, par 3s are where it all goes wrong. Let's change that.

Over the next few weeks, we're going to give you three simple yet effective steps to improve your par 3 performance.

Step 1Club selection

Coming up short is a common problem. But when you change your club selection and aiming strategy, you can go the distance.

Step 2Tee height

Teeing the ball up too high and not using the tee box properly might not seem like a big deal, but it often leads to missed greens.

Step 3Game management

Many golfers fall into the traps set by course designers when they go flag hunting. But there's a way to stay safe while still creating scoring opportunities.

Improve your par 3 performance

What area of your game could we improve to help you lower your average score on par 3s?

Breaking 90

Thinking your way to an achievement

In many ways, the par on a hole is misleading and not especially relevant. Each hole holds a particular set of challenges you need to navigate. If you're shooting in the 90s, it helps to break that challenge down into three parts.

If you're shooting in the 90s, whenever you stand up on the tee box, don't think about the 'par'. Look at what's in front of you. Think back from the centre of the green (from where you're planning two-putts) and plot a journey of makeable shots.

Want to be accompanied?

Game management is as much a part of golf as the swing. If you'd like to have someone accompany you over 9 or 18 holes, offering advice and guidance, and finishing with insight on the quickest way to make 90 an easy number to beat, then
