Course report

As mentioned on Monday, winter frees up the time for staff to do all the maintenance that they can't get to during the busy grass-cutting summer months.

Here's this month's Course Report which will keep you updated on what they've been busy with and what they will be working on over the next few weeks.

Justin Godfrey has been doing some great work with our young students from the Golf Management Campus. Maybe you need some help with your swing, ball-striking, or set-up? Justin is the guy who can help you get the most out of your game.

He is Level 1 Titleist Performance Institute (TPI) certified and can help you improve your golf through a combination of TPI and golf exercises, especially if there is an underlying weakness in your body that is affecting your golf swing.

Your numbers don't lie
A fresh approach to approach play

You've probably heard the term "greens in regulation". If you hit the green to give yourself a birdie putt on any hole, you've hit it 'in regulation'. This is an important number, but there's another one that could be even more useful for you.

How many of your approach shots from 120 metres find the green during a typical round? Is it less than 50%?

For your next three rounds, keep a record of the number of greens you find on approach shots from 120 metres. If you're missing the green more than half of the time, we're going to completely transform your playing experience.

Find more greens >

What is the scoring impact when you miss the green from this distance? Is your short game bailing you out, or are you dropping shots?

How much are missed approach shots affecting your enjoyment?

Better approach play

Striking a mid-iron and watching it stop on the green is one of the most satisfying experiences in golf. We want you to experience this more often. And the first step in doing that is an assessment.

Improve your setup >

Looks can be deceiving

It may not look it, but the new Srixon ZX4 Iron is all about forgiving distance and making the game easier for you.

Golf's FUNdamentals

Your role as a parent

It's easy to fall into the trap of measuring your child's relationship with golf by their competitive performance. But their golfing development depends on so much more than that. And here's where you, as the parent, have an important role to play.

Encourage your child to take part in a range of sports. This will develop their movement fundamentals; agility, balance, coordination and speed.

Instead of setting expectations of progress and success, focus on what your child wants. Encouragement goes a lot further than analysis.

Play golf with them. Not only will you get to work on your game, you also get to bond and strengthen your relationship with your child.

Most parents think of their child's golfing journey as a funnel moving from "entry" to "elite". But actually, it's not a funnel, it's a pie with FUN at its core.

Elite performance is part of the journey for a FEW children. What's more important is that fun and healthy development are part of the journey for ALL children, regardless of skill. Really effective coaching develops golfing skills along with a love for the game.

Let them eat pie

Come and speak to us about getting your child into golf and developing their full potential, not just as golfers, but as people too.
