Spotted on the Golf Course

This African Harrier Hawk (Gymnogene) was spotted on the course. Looks like he's up to no good judging by the distress of the other bird.

Let us help you play better golf

This week Curtley talks you through playing a fade. It is useful when you need to play away from a hazard that is running down the left of a hole e.g. the trees on the left of the 1st & 2nd holes.

Curtley Roberts is an Assistant Teaching Professional at Zwartkop.

Tricky lies

Conquer side slopes

Fairways are full of sloping lies. They're an additional challenge you've got to deal with, and we're going to help you do just that.

Ball below your feet

This one's probably the toughest sloped lie for most golfers. Catching the ball thin is the tendency here.

Ball above your feet

This lie brings the ball closer to you. The loft on the club causes the club face to aim left from these lies so make sure you take your aim carefully, especially with your more lofted clubs.

No more sliding scores

Let's create more scoring chances for you by improving your impact from sloped lies.

Let's hit the slopes

A stable foundation

Your core muscles are hugely important for your swing. Not only do they act as the link between your upper and lower body, but they also stabilise your pelvis and spine – important for any movement.

The more stable your core, the more stable your spine. This has a direct effect on how powerfully you can move and swing your club. You need to condition your core to be strong and stable. According to the British Journal of Sports Medicine, by doing this type of consistent strength training, you can add up to 24% to your clubhead speed.

Strong and stable

Make sure your core muscles are giving your spine the support it needs to get the most out of your game. Let's start with an assessment before and after 8 weeks of consistent strength training to see if you can get your clubhead speed up by over 24%!
