Fitting you for distance

Set lofty distance goals

Feel like you've maxed out your driving distance potential? Your driver's loft could be an adjustment that adds more distance than you ever thought possible.

Hang in there

To achieve your full distance potential, your driver's loft needs to complement your swing speed.

Slower swing speeds mean slower ball speeds and shorter carry distance, so you may need a driver with more loft to increase launch angle and carry.

You're less reliant on higher loft if you have a swing speed that generates a faster ball speed and penetrating flight.

But we'll need to look at more than your swing speed to determine the right loft for you. There's also your angle of attack, impact location and head position at impact to consider. We'll do all this and more during a driver fitting.

Book a fitting

Go above and beyond

By matching your loft to your swing, you're going to find it a lot easier to achieve your true distance potential off the tee.

Tricky lies

Escape with your first try

Playing from bunkers and heavy rough is tough enough as it is. But winter adds water and mush to the mix, and without a gameplan it can be tough to escape.

Your main priority in both cases is to get out and into safety in one shot. In both cases you need to have the correct technique, because the room for error is so much less.

Need some assistance? We're here to help.

See winter as an opportunity

Taking on the unique challenges of winter golf offers and opportunity for achievement and fun. Escaping difficult lies while every one else toils just adds to the enjoyment.
