Range practice

How you practice on the range has a big impact on how quickly the grass is able to recover.

Check out this great demo of Range Practice from Tommy Fleetwood. It perfectly demonstrates the correct way to practice on the range to preserve the grass to its maximum.

Recover a golfer

Time doesn't have to be a reason

People who've left the game often site not having enough time to play.

Many turn to other activities to stay active. It doesn't have to be that way.

Getting a gym workout in before or after work generally takes about 90 minutes. That's about the same time it takes to play 9 holes. But the difference is that with golf, you're getting much more than just physical exercise.

Playing 9 holes twice a week gives you physical and outdoor benefits, along with a social experience. And it doesn't even have to be 9 holes. You can head out for a quick 4 or 6 holes. There's more to staying healthy than just movement. Being outdoors and being part of a social group are critical to health and wellbeing.

Let's help a friend

If you know anyone you think should get back into golf, bring them down, send them to us, or give us their details and we'll reach out personally to reintroduce them to the game.

The right equipment helps

You're forgiven

The design of Putters does so much to aid alignment and aim. But in many cases an off-centre ball strike leads to a slight twisting (that impacts aim) and a real loss of speed (impacting distance control).

The Cleveland Frontline Putters solve the alignment challenge but also, using a weight forward design, create a much higher MOI to resist twisting and improve distance control.

There are different options to support your specific putting stroke. Are you straight back and through? Or do you have an Arc; and how strong is it?

What would improve your putting?

If you're struggling with either control over the distance you hit putts or finding yourself missing the cup with makeable birdie opportunities, then there may be an equipment solution.
