Saving you money this winter

It's just not that simple

We often read that this time of the year, when the clubs are put away, is the time to get them checked and possibly have “lie angles adjusted to create a better fit”.

Most of you probably know that lie angles have something to do with accuracy as shown above. In reality, there's also a likely loss of contact efficiency, and you have the frustration of a shot that will not only be off target, but also come up short.

So yes, some one can get you on a lie board or even use a launch monitor, but would you adjust your lie angles to fit a poor posture or setup? Wouldn't you first want to make sure you had a good setup and posture, addressing the ball at the correct distance?

However experienced you are, get your posture and setup checked regularly because many swing faults start with poor setup and posture.

The best return on your investment

If there's anything you want to do to prepare for a better golf year, it's to get the fundamentals right BEFORE you start investing in equipment solutions. You can wait until spring and then come through or come along now.
