From the Club

The greens will be hollow-tined on Monday and the course will therefore be closed for play on Monday.

What is hollow-tining and why do we do it?

It's a vital part of the course's annual maintenance as greens become compacted and hard over time. Especially with flooding - there is silt that layers up on the greens. This makes the drainage less efficient, and the grass's roots are prevented from absorbing oxygen.

Hollow-tining allows the turf to expand and air and moisture to be more easily absorbed.

It de-thatches the greens and allows for the exchange of poor soil for better soil through top dressing.

It's done at this time of the year because the bent grass is at its peak and poa annua, which we have a lot of, is at its weakest. So this is a good time to encourage more bent grass growth on our greens.

The process involves tining the green – i.e. making the holes. Then we top dress with sand and sweep it into the holes, we water and wait for the grass to grow.

The regrowth happens quickly so with some water and sun you will see the greens recover soon.

More fun in 2025

Make MAGIC

In previous articles we've challenged you to add speed to your golf swing and to tighten your dispersion pattern in 2025.

Here's another challenge. It's a skills challenge. Improve this skill and you could lose between 5 and 10 shots off your scorecard.

Start from 40 metres from a flag with ten balls. Can you play each ball and get within 8 feet in two shots or less each time? Doesn't sound difficult?

Plan to try it.

Once you have the consistency to do that, move to 6 feet. That becomes your new benchmark. Then move to the "master" level and challenge yourself to get within 4 feet in two shots or less, ten successive times.

Three things are required to become a wizard with the wedge. Technique. A wedge that makes it as easy as possible to be consistent. Practice.

The payoff IS MAGIC

Every golfer can be a wizard with the wedge. The magic you make is disappearing strokes off your scorecard.

I'd like to improve my short-game

Srixon Exploring new Boundaries

When engineers are able to work with stronger, lighter, more flexible metals they can break through previous limitations. Srixon engineers have broken through those limitations.

The new I-FLEX face, in the new Srixon ZXi metalwoods, is much faster. It also has dual flex zones to deliver that added speed across the face. More speed. More consistently.

There's also room for more adjustability to personalise your Srixon ZXi Driver. Across the three models you have options to tune spin (for distance), tune shot shape (for more fairways found) and tune swing weight (to improve the feel).

There's also a 1.5 degree adjustment potential in the loft sleeve to tune loft, lie, and face angle.

Make this your Driver

How do you want to change your experience from the tee? How can we use the options provided by the new ZXi Metalwoods from Srixon to create your chosen breakthrough? Let's test how fast and far you could go.
